

Niki Kouzi holds a PhD from the Department of Business Administration and Organizations, School of Management and Economics, University of the Peloponnese. She also holds a postgraduate degree from the Department of Nursing, School of Health Sciences, in Health Services Management and Crisis Management, with a specialization in Health Services Organization and Management.

She is a graduate of the Department of Nursing at the University of West Attica (formerly the Technological Educational Institute of Athens) and the Department of Health and Welfare Unit Management at the University of the Peloponnese (formerly the Technological Educational Institute of Kalamata).

She worked for two years in the 3rd Pulmonology Clinic at Sotiria Hospital and for eleven years in the Artificial Kidney Unit at Kalamata General Hospital, where she specialized in haemodialysis.

For the past eighteen years, she has been working as an administrative officer at the Centre for Training and Lifelong Learning (KEDIVIM) of the University of the Peloponnese, providing administrative and secretarial support to the Centre and its Governing Council.

In parallel, she provides secretarial support to the postgraduate programme Contemporary Sports Communication, Journalism and Photojournalism, offered by the Department of Sport Organization and Management at the University of the Peloponnese in Sparta.

She is a certified non-formal adult education trainer, having successfully completed the examinations of the National Organisation for the Certification of Qualifications and Vocational Guidance (EOPPEP). She has extensive teaching experience in skills development and attitude change. She has taught at vocational training institutes, chambers of commerce and other professional bodies, as well as within LAEK training programmes of the former Manpower Employment Organization (OAED) and Lifelong Learning Centres supervised by the Ministry of Education. Her teaching subjects have included Health Education, First Aid and other topics related to her field of expertise.

She has attended seminars and professional development programmes in Psychology, Counselling, Special Education, First Aid and health-related subjects. She has also participated in scientific conferences, delivering oral presentations on topics relevant to her field of expertise.

Foreign Languages: English and Italian.